USC GYNECOLOGIST SEX ABUSE SCANDAL CONTINUES TO GROW. 400 WOMEN REPORT ALLEGED ABUSE. 20 LAWSUITS FILED BY MANLY, STEWART & FINALDI.

Irvine, California - Attorneys representing former University of Southern California students filed seven additional lawsuits against the University of Southern California in Los Angeles Superior Court today alleging gross sexual misconduct and sexual assault on the USC campus by Dr. George Tyndall, a gynecologist at the USC student health center for nearly 30 years. This latest filing follows the filing of thirteen similar lawsuits for a total of twenty.

The suit alleges that the University received numerous complaints of Tyndall's sexually abusive behavior, dating back to at least 1988, actively and deliberately concealed Tyndall's sexual abuse. The suit further alleges that following an internal investigation of complaints against Tyndall in 2016, the University paid Dr. Tyndall a substantial financial settlement, so he would quietly resign, and USC could continue to actively conceal the myriad of complaints they had received of Tyndall's sexually abusive behavior.

Victim's attorney John Manly, a USC alumnus said, "This latest filing demonstrates the alarming scope and length of the scandal involving former USC gynecologist and the University's efforts to cover it up. The alleged victims range in age from 24 to 42 and they reported abuse by Dr. Tyndall throughout a 27-year period. Sadly, none of these women should have ever met Dr. Tyndall since we now know that the University received a written complaint about Tyndall in 1988, before he was hired as a gynecologist at the USC student health center."

Mr. Manly also said that this case has disturbing similarities to the case against disgraced Michigan State University doctor Larry Nassar who allegedly molested more than 300 women and girls under the guise of performing medical treatments. Mr. Manly was the lead attorney representing victims in that case which resulted in a record breaking settlement by MSU of 500 million dollars.

According to the complaint's allegations, Dr. Tyndall used his position of trust and authority to sexually abuse his victims on multiple occasions, including but not limited to: forcing patients to strip naked, groping plaintiffs' breasts, and digitally penetrating plaintiffs' rectums and vaginas under the guise of medical treatment and taking close up photographs of Patients private areas, for no other purpose than to satisfy his own prurient desires.

One of the alleged victims in this case, an African American woman reports that Tyndall made racist comments during her examination.

In 2016, Dr. Tyndall's employment was terminated following an investigation by the USC Office of Equity and Diversity. The report concluded that Dr. Tyndall "had violated the University policy on harassment by making repeated racially discriminatory and sexually inappropriate remarks during patient encounters." The report further concluded Dr. Tyndall's practices of digitally penetrating patients before inserting a speculum was "outdated and not current standard of care," but not criminal.

USC did not inform law enforcement or the state medical board of the complaints against Dr. Tyndall. He was given a cash payout and allowed to "resign." Dr. Tyndall renewed his medical license in January.

Since the scandal broke last week, more than 400 students have contacted a University hotline established to receive complaints and information about Tyndall. Victim's attorney Ronald Labriola, a partner in The Senator's (Ret.) Firm has reported that some of his clients who called the hotline received a call back from USC lawyers and risk managers.

"Victims of sexual assault need to talk to law enforcement, not lawyers who have been hired to defend their perpetrator's employer. Any woman who believes she has been assaulted by Dr. Tyndall or has information about him should not call the USC hotline of the Campus police. They should immediately contact the Los Angeles Police Department Robbery/Homicide-Special Assault Section at (213) 486-6910," said Mr. Labriola.
